- Coaching and Individual Effectiveness

- North America

Creative and adaptable, Mike approaches the design and delivery of learning and development solutions with a keen intuition and a profound ability to relate to his clients.

Business Experience

Since 1994, Mike has been conducting business and personal effectiveness design and delivery training, coaching, train-the-trainer, and training strategy development for a wide spectrum of clients. He works for global corporations, leading training firms, and universities as well as small and middle market businesses. Mike has obtained unique and relevant market experience in helping companies achieve their goals. Training globally provided him with a rich understanding of cultural differences as well as global experience in train the trainer skills.

In addition to corporate training, Mike provides assistance to improve business effectiveness skills through 1-2-1, or group, coaching and designing/delivering key business improvement programs. He assists clients in developing their communication skills and crafting their presentation style for all business situations.

Career Background

In 2009 Mike leveraged his extensive experience to co-found Teape Training International (TTI). Since then, TTI has cultivated a global network of training experts who service a varied client base, focusing on structured learning strategies and custom training interventions. Prior to co-founding TTI, Mike was the Training Manager for JPMorgan Chase's North America Investment Bank Operations and Technology Division.

Testimonial

"Michael just did a two-day Train-the-Trainer workshop for the Volunteers of America of Greater New York. It was one of the best trainings our group ever attended; consensus on this was unanimous. Michael also worked with our leadership curriculum material to tailor the training to our needs; he was responsive, available and incredibly engaging. We would love to have him back anytime at Volunteers of America."
